WILL THE FREEDMEN WORK?—The New York Commercial Advertiser presents the following interesting facts:

The question is best answered by the following statement of facts. In and about Hampton, Va., on certain confiscated lands, dwell 4,500 colored persons, divided into 800 families, each in a humble tenement. Of these, 587 can read and write, and 913 are church members. Their property is estimated at $51,000. They have five churches, built out of their own earnings, and they pay their pastors $1,000 per annum. They have a store in Hampton, filled with goods costing $7,500, and managed by an association of their own. At this store there was sold in one day $370 worth of goods. These colored people have recently held a meeting, at which they state the facts in the case, and what they have done on the confiscated lands formerly belonging to Sinclair and Shields. They say:

We unhesitatingly assert that the farm of Sinclair and Shields, arable and cultivated before the rebellion in a superior manner, as was supposed, will this year yield better, richer and heavier crops twice told than was ever known before under the system of slavery. More than 37 of us now at this meeting were raised upon these farms, and we know whereof we speak, that free black labor is altogether more productive and remunerative than slave labor, even under circumstances of cruel and unjust deprivation and denial of equal rights and privileges to which as free laborers we have been subjected, and that to a people less hopeful and ambitious would have almost precluded improvement. Those who assert that we are not capable of maintaining ourselves, either wickedly misrepresent and malign us, or are grossly ignorant of our capabilities. We are anxious and willing, and believe we are able to build up a city upon our lands as soon and as well, as orderly, as prosperous, as religious, as patriotic and as intelligent as could be done by any other people, provided we can secure the fee of the lands, and receive that aid and encouragement to which we are justly entitled.

Just at this time the former owners of the confiscated lands return and seek to deprive these negroes of the fruits of their toil. The negroes have offered, through their counsel, to pay the claimants liberal sums of money in order to quiet all conflicting claims, and to obtain, with the consent and approbation of the United States Government, the fee of the lands without controversy or question, so that they can at once enter upon substantial and permanent improvements. The exhibit made by these colored people is certainly a good one, and controverts some of the objections made to emancipation.

PROFESSION AND PRACTICE.—The Richmond Whig warns its readers that while they hold loyal meetings they must also act like loyal citizens. It says:

The holding of public meetings by the citizens of Virginia, and the adoption of loyal and patriotic resolutions, is a matter we consider of urgent and pressing importance. But these meetings and these resolutions will amount to nothing, unless the people should act in accordance with their spirit at the coming elections.

The Petersburg Express says on the same subject:

Our firm and fixed belief is, that the voice of the people, as declared in the selection of their representatives in Congress and the State Legislatures, will alone be accepted by the President and his Northern friends as a conclusive and decisive test of loyalty at the South, and whatever may be the demonstrations, in the meantime, in the way of public meetings they will go for nothing, unless they shall be sustained by the results of the coming elections. If men of the right political stripe (and what that stripe is everybody knows,) shall be chosen, the object of the intermediate popular meetings will at once be secured. If objectionable men are elected, then all the resolutions that can be framed and adopted, however unanimously and enthusiastically, will be but labor lost.

Here is a sample of the grim humor with which the necessity to work is acknowledged. It is from the Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist. The interesting victim of circumstances dismounts from the high horse of chivalry, and steps upon the prosy level of real life. One more grand flourish of trumpets, the old fanfarone music so familiar to us, and then "work for a living:"

The chivalry, says a snarling scrub writer, must work for a living. The fellow is undoubtedly right, though he might have used a little more courtesy in expressing his opinion. Henceforth the impoverished youth of the South must look to labor for a livelihood, and the sooner the truth is realized the better. We are far from believing in the so-called nobility of labor, for if our memory serves us, labor is but the primal curse. In the days of our first innocency, we read of no such thing as eating one's bread in the sweat of one's brow, and it would take more than the timid platitudes of rhetoric parsons to convince us that there is any dignity in toil. Still, while holding to the Scripture doctrine that labor is a curse, we can readily see that the highest manhood may be displayed in the cheerful, stout hearted performance of any responsibility Providence may see fit to cast upon us. Death, too, is a curse, and we fancy it would be a dexterous sophist who could find any material for glorification in the existence of that stern incident to humanity—yet death may be met in such a way as to reflect the highest honor on the dauntless soul that smiles at all its horrors.

THE SOUTHERN MAIL SERVICE.—Postmaster General Dennison has made a grand overhauling in the matter of the postal service in the Southern States. Hereafter the service in the South is intended to be self-sustaining, and it is believed will meet all the necessities of the people, notwithstanding the great reduction ordered in the amount of service. Governor Dennison has found an immense excess of service was being performed in these States at the breaking out of the rebellion. The Southern mail service, as compared with the year 1860, can be greatly reduced without interfering with the facilities for delivering the mails as required by the people. Another fact connected with the recent and present lettings is of importance to the public, viz: The Postmaster-General has made contracts for mail service at an average of 40 per centum less than the rate charged by the contractors prior to the rebellion.

WESTERN STEAMBOAT BURNERS—JEFF. DAVIS SUMMONED.—A special Washington dispatch of September 8th says:

A Military Commission has been organized, and will proceed to the trial, at St. Louis, of the burners of our steamers upon the Western rivers. It is stated that the culprits, many of whom have been a long time under arrest, have a large fund at their command, and have secured the services of Col. J. W. Bell to conduct their defense. Subpœnas have been issued for Jefferson Davis and Secretary Mallory and Seddon, to testify in the case.

THE FIRST COLORED MAIL CONTRACTOR.—On the 7th September Postmaster-General Dennison made a contract with Robert Orrick, of Winchester, for conveying the mails from Pattown to Leesburg, Va., and intermediate points, twice a week, at $325 per annum. The accepted bidder in this case is the first colored man to whom a contract for carrying the mails has been awarded since the Department was organized. Of his own free will and accord, finding no line of stages on the above road, he came forward with commendable enterprise and industry and tendered a proposal for the service.

POPULATION OF MONTANA.—Montana Territory, including the Rocky Mountains above north latitude 45, and the valleys of the Yellow Stone, Upper Missouri and Bow rivers, is estimated to contain a population of 30,000 civilized inhabitants. Montana was a savage country three years ago, and in the short space of time which has intervened, the gold attractions have congregated the large multitude passed within her borders, and founded cities in which are to be found all the comforts and refinements of modern society. The official capital is Virginia City, situated on the Jefferson Fork of the Upper Missouri.

GEN. FITZ HUGH LEE.—This late Confederate officer is a resident of Nevada City, where he is about to enter upon the practice of the law. He is a tall, intellectual, melancholy looking man, apparently about thirty-five years of age, and is very reserved and quiet in his department.—Sacramento Bee.

COOLIE IMMIGRATION.—The New York Post thus comments upon the latest Democratic vagary:

Because some angry planters in Texas and elsewhere began lately to cry out for Coolie labor, certain so-called Democratic journals in the North ready as ever to fawn upon Southern aristocrats, are already giving indications of their willingness to defend and urge a wholesale importation of Asiatics. It is surely a singular and disgusting spectacle to see the very men who but a year ago most vociferously asserted that America was for the Anglo-Saxon race only, a white man's country, and all that, now turning a short corner, and preparing to welcome a cargo of yellow idolaters from the most inferior race in the East. Prof. Draper's bold speculation, in his Future Policy of America, that we should fill up this Continent, not only with the white workmen of Europe, but with the yellow men of China and Hindostan, is useful to the persons North and South who are prepared to meet this Coolie movement. But they are careful to cite only half of what the learned Professor says. He conjectures not only that we shall presently be invaded by a host from China, but further, that we shall swallow up this host and digest it, perhaps—by introducing polygamy amongst our own people. A more cold blooded speculation we have not read of lately, but the Professor remarks, as though he had foreseen the ready adaptability of politicians to new circumstances and new codes of morals, that, in his opinion, the introduction of polygamy may be brought about as a political measure, and used as a means to hoist some party or person into power. We are inclined to think that it would more probably "hoist" a party in the vulgar sense of the word—would blow it up in such a style that it would not come down whole. Yet, if we are to have a Coolie immigration party, we may yet see a polygamic party also—as it is only the first step which costs. The question of the introduction of Asiatics in this country does not depend at all upon whether negro labor can be made useful in the production of Southern staples. If the blacks should prove useless as workmen, which we do not believe, though their old masters took the best way, by rearing them in ignorance, to make poor workmen of them, white men will take their place. There is a great deal of talk about the importance of labor in the South, but if the men who jabber about it would turn their hands to something useful, if they would consent to do a little honest hard work themselves, the South might do very well for labor.

HOW JEFF. DAVIS'S BROTHER-IN-LAW GOT PUMMELED.—Capt. G. W. Halsey of the 150th New York Regiment explains the circumstances of the difficulty which he had recently with two persons named Short and Howell at a hotel in Savannah, Georgia. He says:

On the evening of the occurrence, as I was descending the stairs at the Pulaski House, I saw a party at the foot in gray clothes, some of them evidently under the influence of liquor, who were talking loudly, disloyally and in a manner especially offensive to any Yankee officer. After waiting a moment for a friend, I passed them with some difficulty, and in doing so Mr. Howell repeated several offensive epithets—too profane and vulgar for publication—which were evidently intended for my ear. I replied, "If you do not use a little more respectful language in my presence I shall be forced to compel you." He responded with a coarse personal insult to me, and I knocked him down. As I was walking away Major Short accosted me. I turned and said to him, "I don't want any conversation with you." He replied with an oath, "I don't want any conversation with you." I struck him, and just then the guard, previously summoned by some party without my knowledge, came in and arrested Howell and Short.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE.

TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 10, 1865.

The New York "Democracy"—A New Dodge.

The Democracy of New York at their late State Convention gave to an admiring country a new proof that their "principles" are fixed and unalterable as eternity. The grand old party never would countenance any innovation upon the time-honored doctrines of its political creed—oh no! It always adhered with unswerving fidelity to "principle," and whether fortune smiled or frowned it was all the same. In the State of New York a little while ago the party was distinguished by its opposition to the war for the Union, by its strenuous adherence to slavery, and by the tenacity with which it upheld the State sovereignty doctrine. By assuming these points it was beaten. Now what is the sequel? What does the firm and unchanging "Democracy" undertake to do now? It simply abandons its old "principles" in toto, and and adopts those of a precisely opposite character. It clears itself or endeavors to clear itself at once and forever from all sympathy or complicity with slavery. It essays to throw off its shoulders all responsibility for the accursed institution; it repudiates Horatio Seymour and his scheming coadjutors; it pronounces emphatically against State and in favor of National sovereignty; it shows its admiration for those who were lately engaged in "waging an unholy war against our Southern brethren," by nominating some of them for the highest State offices, and in all respects does and says the exact reverse of all it did and said only one year ago. And this, it is to be borne in mind, is the action of the party that always boasts of the immutability of its principles! This the "Democracy" of New York! Not the action of a pitiful faction of the party in some obscure district, but of the "Democracy" of the Great Empire State! What shrewd device, what cunning dodge, will the faultless and changeless "Democracy" try next? It must be owned that they are wonderful adepts in the arts of legerdemain. Observation long ago taught us to be surprised at nothing they do, for during the last fifteen years they have been drifting about without any settled object in view except to sustain slavery, and in that time have done all manner of contradictory things; but never before did the party of "unalterable principles" make a more complete or sudden surrender of the doctrines which it magnified as the essence of political wisdom and truth, than has been witnessed in its late action in New York.

This device of theirs is truly a very clever dodge. It might succeed if the people did not know these political hucksters and place-seekers of old. Were it possible to forget the late treason of the "Democratic" party, there might be some chance for its candidates in a few of the loyal States. A movement of the kind lately originated in New York is made notoriously for one object. The "Democracy" want office and power. By taking this crooked course they hope to accomplish their purpose. Hungry office-seekers have the one single idea in mind, and they care not what means they employ to attain the desired end.

We should like to know from the "Democratic" papers of this State whether they are prepared to follow in the wake of their party brethren in New York. Wouldn't it be interesting to hear long discourses from the Review and Democrat against State rights, State sovereignty and human slavery? Things as strange as this have happened before, and that too in the political history of the editors of the Oregon Copperhead press. We shall hardly know, however, what "principles" the unchanging "Democracy" of this State will put forth or adopt, until after their next convention. And it may safely be guessed that their platform will then say one thing and their candidates another, as usual.

NAVIGATION OF THE MISSOURI.—We have the notes of a trip from Fort Benton to St. Louis, and back again by the Missouri river, showing the impracticability of navigating that stream. Boats started from St. Louis last Spring, drawing from three to four feet of water; the owners knew well enough that it was impossible for them to reach Fort Benton, heavily laden as they were, but they were willing to take the chances, get up as high as they could, and let goods be strewn at various points along the river, and reach their destination as best they might. Steamboat men estimate the distance from St. Louis to Fort Benton as being over 4,000 miles, and they concede that the navigation of the upper portion of the river will have to be made a matter of special study and reduced to a science, to render it successful—the great obstacles consisting in the frequent shifting of the channel, snags and sawyers; there are but few pilots who understand the navigation of the upper part of the river.

O'MEARA AND MALONE are the chief workers—the factotums—of the regular "Democratic" party in Oregon, and whoever else attempts to put in his oar they thrash soundly. Their prerogative is not to be meddled with. But how shall we characterize the party which employs such tools as these? Pope once exclaimed "What must the priest be where the monkey is a god!" To apply Johnson's illustration from this observation, we may ask, mutatis mutandis: What must the drudges of a party be when its heads are such men as Whitaker, Jo Lane, Ben Hayden, Andy Shuck and Jake Woodsides?

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—The number of men at Fort Walla Walla has been greatly reduced. Lieut. Kerns, of Company D, Oregon Infantry, has gone to Camp Lyon with a detachment of men from there. Lieut. John F. Noble, of the Oregon Cavalry, has command at Walla Walla and is performing the duties of A. A. Q. M. and A. A. C. S. Surgeon Quivey has been ordered to report for duty at Camp Logan. Dr. C. M. Steinberger will attend as Physician at Walla Walla garrison. The Statesman is greatly displeased at the reduction of the garrison, but does not argue as a reason fear of Indians. Soldiers are not enrolled for the purpose of idling away time in cities where there is no use for them.

QUARTZ TO THE NORTH OF US.—In 1860 many disappointed miners from Similkameen came back to Oregon by the way of the Wenatchee and the heads of the Yakima river. Some placer mines were found on Wenatchee and worked during the summer of 1860, but the Oro Fino excitement induced the miners to migrate, and the mines were abandoned. In the last few weeks says the Mountaineer, the discovery of gold and silver bearing quartz on the Natches river has again attracted public attention to that quarter. It is very probable that thorough prospecting will develop a good quartz mining district in that country.

POSTAL ORDERS.—It is proposed by some of the Oregon press to petition for the extension of the system of postal money orders to this State. There are several points in this State where the system might work great advantage to the people. Salem is suggested as one point. Portland certainly ought to be another, and the Dalles without doubt will be selected for that purpose.—Mountaineer.

What use are postal orders to the people of this valley? We have no mails to carry them.

GENERAL SCHIMMELPFENNIG recently died at his home in Pennsylvania of a disease contracted in the late war. This officer will be remembered as the one who first occupied Charleston when it was flanked by Sherman. He also bore a distinguished part in the battle of Gettysburg.

The Iowa City Republican is advising its readers to "hold on to wool." Whereupon Prentice remarks: "That's what our anti amendment men in Kentucky are trying to do."

The Imperialists as heretofore announced occupied Chihuahua Aug. 15. On his late visit to the interior, Maximilian was received with much enthusiasm by the inhabitants, being welcomed by addresses by the clergy, working classes, &c.

Among other decrees issued by the Emperor's Government is one appropriating $100,000 towards building a street railroad, proclaiming Mexico open to emigration from all countries, and establishing military colonies along the route between the Capital and Vera Cruz.

A National exhibition of the country was [illegible] held in the City of Mexico when the [illegible] left.

THE PUBLIC DEBT [illegible]—On the [illegible] of September Secretary McCulloch published a statement of the public debt as it appeared from the books, Treasurers' returns and requisitions in the Treasury Department on the 31st of August, 1865. The recapitulation is as follows:

AMOUNT OUTSTANDING.

Debt bearing interest in coin	$1,108,[illegible]
Interest	64,[illegible]
Debt bearing interest in lawful money	1,2[illegible]
Interest	[illegible]
Debt on which interest has ceased	[illegible]
Debt bearing no interest	[illegible]
Total debt	$2,[illegible]088,[illegible]
Total interest	[illegible]
Legal tender notes in circulation	[illegible]
Two year five per cent notes	[illegible]
United States notes, old issue	[illegible]
United States notes, new issue	[illegible]
Compound interest notes act of March 4th, 1864	[illegible]
Compound interest notes act of June 30th, 1864	20[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

The exhibition leaves the croakers who have predicted financial disasters and ruin to the nation without an excuse or substantial pretext for continuing their efforts to becloud the financial future of the country. The statement compared with that of July 1st shows the net increase to be but $450,000. The course of the Treasury is shown by the fluctuations in the amounts of the various outstanding securities since the last statement, as follows: Increase in the compound interest notes, $1,092,690; increase in the temporary 5 per cent loan, $[illegible]; decrease in 6 per cent temporary loan, $3,469,000; decrease in 5 per cent legal tenders, $3,000,000; decrease in certificates of indebtedness, $21,011,000. The aggregate interest on the public debt has been decreased $120,000.

The amount of coin now in the Treasury is nearly $46,500,000, or about $10,000,000 more than a month ago. [Since increased to $70,000,000, according to late telegrams.—EDITOR BULLETIN.] The currency now in the Treasury is about $[illegible],000,000, as against $81,[illegible],000, showing a reduction of currency in the Treasury for the month of August of $38,500,000; but the suspended requisitions amount to a little over $2,000,000, a large reduction from the last preceding statement. The receipts from taxes and customs dues begin to tell substantially against any further demand by the Treasury outside of the regular channels of supply, and plainly indicate an early maximum of the National debt rather below than above the prevailing estimates of $3,000,000,000. From present prospects the Internal Revenue in September and October, if not in November, must come in on a large scale.

At the port of New York, in July and August, the Government collected $23,000,000 in gold customs on $40,000,000 or $48,000,000 of foreign merchandise taken for consumption.

In July and August 1860, before the war, the value of foreign goods taken for consumption at the same port was $19,889,269, on which Government received only $5,904,518.

The receipts of Internal Revenue at Washington, September 4th, reached the unprecedented sum of $4,200,000, being $1,768,88[illegible] greater than the receipts of any former day.

A Washington dispatch of September [illegible] says: The Treasury Department does not anticipate raising any money before the coming session of Congress. The receipts from internal revenue alone, from July 1 to the 1st prox., will probably amount to from $100,000,000 to $110,000,000, while there will be no falling off of custom duties, as heavy orders for foreign goods are known to have gone abroad for supplying the exhausted markets of the South and West. The receipts from the sales of war material, now no longer necessary, will also contribute in no small degree to the liquidation of the public debt.

MONTANA NEWS.—The Montana Post says that ten large freight teams from Milk River arrived at Virginia City on the 26th of September. They met no Indians on the road. On the 18th of September Tom Cooke was hung by the Vigilants at Helena. He was a pickpocket from Boise. Several robberies and one murder had been committed in the vicinity of Virginia City. Mr. Van Trevitt, of Dalles, has returned from Montana. Extensive coal beds and oil springs have been discovered near Fort Benton. Fifteen hundred families have come out with Capt. Fisher to settle on the Yellowstone. The supplies from Salt Lake, the Missouri River and the Pacific side are deemed amply sufficient for the Montana trade.

For the Benefit of the Public.

A fact which merits the attention of every philanthropist and sympathizer with human sufferers.

The disease which raged within my system for nearly two years, precipitating and hurrying me to an early grave, was pronounced by every practitioner and intelligent [illegible] to be a cancer at the upper part of my chest and an inflammatory swelling in the bone of my leg [illegible] sleepless nights and general restlessness [illegible] and, in spite of all the treatment I received of the eminent and most experienced physicians, slight remissions at short intervals was all the relief [illegible] the pain always returned with double vigor and fury, the cancer growing gradually and eating its way onwardly and exposing the articulation of the collar and breast bones, which made me despair and surrender all hopes of recovery [illegible] totally removed and radically cured by the newly arrived Dr. N. DAVIDSOHN, who has in a short time most humbly [illegible] public trust and confidence, and whom I think to be the only one who deserves it; for he selects his medical skill, which has been tested on several occasions, to be of a superior grade, his kind, faithful and sincere attendance inspires every hopeless heart with [illegible] cheering prospects of recovery.

I therefore feel it a solemn human duty to give the matter publicity that many other sufferers might enjoy the same opportunity with the same happy results as I had.

From the Upper Columbia

We are indebted to [illegible] Wells, Fargo & Co.'s [illegible] and [illegible] for the following [illegible] will be read with [illegible] The Idaho [illegible] says:

We are [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] with healthy growing crops and [illegible] An [illegible] now awaits the commencement [illegible] take the place of unpretending wooden buildings.

Workmen will soon commence the construction of a large wharf [illegible] to be used by the O. S. N. Company, and they will hurry its completion as the falling of the river will [illegible] It was intended [illegible] permanent wharf at this place [illegible] upon, but [illegible] the wharf will not be built at present and a boat [illegible]

The Third [illegible]

S. B. [illegible] putting up [illegible] summer.

Several loads of lumber [illegible] gone out the past few days to improve the places of farmers living in the Umatilla [illegible]

H. Hewitt, with a team of sixty animals, left for the Blackfoot mines Wednesday.

N. Henry left yesterday [illegible]

The Idaho Statesman [illegible] speaks of the Minerva ledge lately discovered on the Yuba [illegible] which promises exceedingly well. There is a large amount [illegible] lying about the ledge [illegible] the ground and it all [illegible] good prospect. Several tons have been taken out of the ledge and [illegible] a crumb can be found that does not show the [illegible] when crushed. The highest rate [illegible] by hand mortar is at the rate of $300 per ton. The ledge is over three feet wide and there seems to be every reason to believe that the Minerva needs only to be opened to take a high rank among the Yuba ledges.

The same paper says: Mr. Miller, agent of the Fast Freight Line, came up yesterday and informs us that he is going to increase his stock so as to run six horse teams all the way from Idaho City to Umatilla. The company yesterday bought sixteen of the finest horses on the road, being all large American stock just brought up from Oregon. A fall in the temperature last Friday, was attended with showers of rain in the valley, but covered the mountains with snow. The Owyhee mountains appear to be covered quite thickly, but on the north side of the valley, toward Idaho very little is to be seen.

The livery stable of Davis & Richly at Boise City, was robbed on Tuesday of over $2,000 in gold dust.

From the Idaho Statesman of Oct. 1st we obtain the following items:

Secretary H. C. Gilson received his commission yesterday, appointing him Secretary of Idaho Territory. He will hereafter feel somewhat more at home in his office, since in place of being Acting Secretary, he is now Secretary in fact, and, by virtue of his office, Acting Governor.

Mr. C. M. Smith of Chicago passed through town yesterday with two large boilers and the necessary pumps and machinery to lift and force water on to some of the high auriferous claims near Idaho City. It is designed to be used for hydraulic working, and is expected to throw five hundred gallons every three minutes. Mr. Smith has been four months on the road.

One night, early this week, the Indians ran off twenty-one head of horses from Galloway, on the Weiser river. Mr. G. soon gathered a party of his neighbors and started in pursuit, recovered all the stolen stock and [illegible] one Indian. They also captured four head of Indian horses in addition to their own. It is reported that the party were going to renew the pursuit.

That most erratic of all places, the wide world over, Idaho City, has plenty of churches but no preachers—several good houses of worship but no religious services. Boise City presents her case a little differently. We have good ministers, and service every Sunday, but no churches. It is contemplated to build, at Boise City, a Baptist Church for Rev. Hiram Hamilton.

The firm of [illegible]sburg & Co. were losers in the Straw Ranch stage robbery, to the amount of about eleven hundred dollars. We have not heard of any other losses by residents in this place.

The starting of the Fast Freight Line has resulted in the liveliest little opposition in the passenger business ever witnessed in Idaho. Both lines seem to be running full most of the time and everybody is going or coming. Fare which has heretofore been sixty dollars to Umatilla was yesterday down to half that price, with a prospect of being lower to-day.

We noticed in the wagons of the Fast Freight Line packages that arrived in Boise City from San Francisco in eleven days. This line is apparently doing a good business, the wagons come in from the west within ten minutes of schedule time. This idea of getting freight through from San Francisco in eleven days, and from Umatilla in five, and that too at prices but little above mule team rates, is something new for this country and not at all unpleasant. This line was started with a view to accommodate the large and increasing business of the house of B. M. Durell & Co. in getting their own freight through with greater dispatch than was possible by the ordinary way, but the line has thus far been unable to take all the freight that was offered by other parties.

The Walla Walla Statesman of October 6th, furnishes us with the following:

Mr. I. Kellogg, late of the Snake river ferry, will start on Monday for the Spokane river to build a bridge over that stream, twelve miles above Antoine Plante's on the road to Blackfoot.

H. J. Johnson has been appointed P. Master for Walla Walla [illegible] Kelly resigned.

Immigrant wagons continue to arrive in the valley. Some five or six families have also arrived here within the past ten days from Grand Ronde valley, who have come over with the intention of settling here. It is said that upwards of five thousand immigrants have gone this year to Oregon.

It seems probable that they are to have no court at Walla Walla this Fall. Matters are badly mixed up and it has given rise to a great deal of dissatisfaction among the people of the county generally, and the question of petitioning to annex to Oregon—which has been discussed more or less for the past year or two—has again been brought up, and we would not be surprised to see some decided steps taken in that matter.

There appears to be at this time a great scarcity of girls to do housework in Walla Walla. We hear inquiries for them almost every day. There are said to be quite a number of them arriving with the immigrant trains, who, if they would appear in the city, could find good homes and profitable employment.

BLACKFOOT CORRESPONDENCE.—A writer from Helena, Montana Territory, under date of August 12th, to the Walla Walla Statesman says the stories about [illegible] large [illegible] credited by him, and he will not attempt any particulars [illegible] There is little work [illegible] the stampedes [illegible] camp [illegible] two per week. He is of the opinion that a town of no small dimensions must grow up either in Bitter Root or Hell Gate valley, and that this [illegible] largely to the supplies of the [illegible] here stand well and will [illegible] by a liberal [illegible]

Speaking of the manners and customs of the people the writer says: "Many who come from the Western States are [illegible] of the people of this Territory. They do not remember that most of them are from the Western States, and have not been changed by contact with the climate and customs of California. They still preserve the manners and customs of their native towns and villages. Besides the first emigration from the west to this country was [illegible] calculated to produce a favorable impression of the class of people that might be expected to follow. The terms used to designate the two classes of immigrants illustrates the feeling [illegible] concealed by the most ignorant classes. For "States" or [illegible] immigrants the term used is "tender foot;" for California, Oregon and Idaho people—"yonder siders." If anything like an extravagant story of courage and bravery is told by a tender foot [illegible] those [illegible] story that such a [illegible] must have [illegible] If a tender foot [illegible] ignorance of matters or want of [illegible] the "yonder sider" laughs immoderately [illegible] which will take a [illegible] generating [illegible] Fremont.

He advises people not to [illegible] unless [illegible] can well afford [illegible] long northern winter with [illegible] the mines are rich but the [illegible] could make a fortune. But all must pay a tax [illegible] both the fortunate and unfortunate for every article [illegible] consumption.

AN [illegible]—Mr. Major [illegible] building in the Missouri frontier [illegible] New Mexico and Utah, is now on his road across the Plains with seventy wagons loaded with quartz mining machinery for South [illegible] supplying the mines with machinery. It is now [illegible] that [illegible] gold mines [illegible] men of means and enterprise at the East. That they will [illegible] expenditures [illegible] Our mines pay dividends, while Washoe, Esmeralda and Reese River [illegible] had the California [illegible] the name of Nevada had been given to Boise and Owyhee these places would now be [illegible] as the richest of all mines. But it appears these mines will attract capital from the East instead of California and that people from [illegible] will transport a [illegible] of the machinery to execute work [illegible] the place.

The True Story of the Capture of Jeff Davis

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly for September gives an account of the capture of the rebel chief which he asserts to be "literally true to the minutest detail." We extract the following particulars from this account

THE TRAIL

Pritchard, after parting with Harnden sent a strong picket to the ferry and then resumed his march on the river road About three miles from Abbeville he found a negro watching his master's broken-down wagon From him he learned some interesting particulars concerning the train which Harnden was pursuing and which had crossed the ferry the night before, among them this That when the party with the train came to pay the ferryman, the latter went to strike a light, which the former forbade, saying that they could pay well enough without a light, and in fact did pay him a $10 gold piece and a $10 Confederate note – a circumstance which, with other things made Pritchard believe that Davis crossed the river with the train. He also learned that the river road was intersected at Wilcox's Mills by a cross road leading to Irwinville and as Davis appeared to be in the habit of traveling away from the train, it seemed not improbable that he might be found in a road parallel to the one the train was following. Accordingly, that nothing on his part should be left undone to effect the capture of the fugitive, he selected thirteen of the best mounted men from each company of his command, and determined with them to follow the road to Irwinville at which point, if Davis should not be fallen in with on the way, he could communicate again with Harnden Captain Hathaway in command of the remainder of the force, was left at Abbeville, with orders to patrol and picket the river

All things being arranged, we pushed rapidly for Irwinville This was also a beautiful moonlight night The dust having been laid by the rain, and the air bracing, the horses stepped out at a free and easy pace, that brought us to our destination about 1 o'clock, A. M., of the 10th, but neither finding Davis on the road, nor, to our surprise, the Wisconsin regiment in the town Without any unnecessary disturbance, we halted to gather information—the men, meanwhile, sliding from their horses to catch, for the moment, a bit of sleep In the midst of this quiet a woman began to scream, and an officer went to learn the cause She complained that some of the men "Burners," had got into her smoke-house and were appropriating her hams This was speedily rectified, but not her disposition to talk and scream. She said "There's a camp of our men out there, 200 of them, and they will pay you for pestering me!" And she screamed as if she would alarm the camp About this time a negro boy, belonging to the woman, was pulled out of bed, and having "allowed" that he knew of this camp, and had been to it, he was promptly taken to the head of the column to serve as a guide. Pritchard, convinced that he had found Davis's camp, and determined to make sure of his capture, sent Lieut Purinton with 25 dismounted men to gain the other side of it, in order to prevent escape in that direction, when he should charge in from this side; he also moved his command forward about a mile, and then quietly waited for day to break The realization that we were near to and probably would seize the head of the Confederacy and thus destroy at once the political organization and rallying point of the thing, made us all tremble with anxiety To put the finishing stroke to the rebellion was our high duty, and would be a crowning proof and act of patriotism. At this time we knew nothing of the reward for the apprehension of Davis, we knew only that he was the chief man of our country's enemies, and we were resolved that none should blame us if we failed to capture or kill him.

THE CAPTURE

At daybreak the order was passed in a whisper to make ready to enter the camp. The men were alive to the work Mounting their horses, the column moved at a walk until the tents came in sight, and then at the word dash in. The camp was found pitched on both sides of the road. On the left hand, as we entered, were wagons, horses, and men; on the right were two wall tents, fronting from the road. All was quiet in the camp We encountered no guards; if there were any out, they must have been asleep. The order of the forces entering the camp should perhaps be given. Capt Hudson commanded the advance guard, Lieut. Stauber followed, with a detachment of the first battalion; next, Lieut Bentall, with one of the second battalion, and Lieut Bennett brought up the rear guard The force in advance of Lieut. Bentall, immediately on entering the camp, dispersed among the tents on the left of the road. Some of his men rode to the tents on the road, among them private James H. Lynch of Co. C—It is well, for good reasons, to mention the names of enlisted men who, seeing a horse saddled and bridled, with holsters and traveling-bag, held by a black man in front of one of the tents, at once clapped the muzzle of his Spencer to the head of the "boy" and secured the animal This was Davis's well-trained and fleetest saddle horse, which Lynch who was in Richmond when the war broke out, and came and joined us at Murfreesborough after the battle of Stone River, claims to have recognized.

Scarcely had this horse been secured, when firing was heard down the road, in the direction of Purinton, Pritchard instantly gave the order to advance, and Lieut Bentall, who had continued on horseback on the road, holding his men mainly in hand for an emergency that might arise, promptly obeyed, and crossing a slough of mud and water swept toward the firing, and was greeted with a volley that killed two of his men and severely wounded himself in the left arm He had been previously wounded in the right arm in the Atlanta campaign. He, however, quickly formed his men to fight, uniting them with those under Purinton, and for a few minutes a decidedly earnest conflict was waged, when a man by the name of Wright, sergeant of company A, discovering that our opponents wore the blue uniform, and divining that they must be the Wisconsin regiment, ran, swinging his hat, over to them, and stopped the firing—an act of cool bravery that saved, no doubt, many lives

* * * * However Pritchard's arrangements may be cavilled at, they certainly secured the capture of Davis. For the Wisconsin force, coming in the direction it did, could hardly have crossed the body of mud and water that lay between it and Davis, without alarming him, and affording him time to mount his horse, kept, as we found, ready saddled and bridled for flight, and to escape into the woods surrounding the camp. But by Mr Pritchard's movement, Davis was not alarmed in season; and when he discovered his horse out of his power, he sought to escape by stratagem. That he relied upon his horse for safety is evident from the fact that his arms and money (gold) were on the saddle

DAVIS IN WOMAN'S CLOTHES

Andrew Bee, a private of Company L, went to the entrance of Davis' tent, and was met by Mrs Davis, "bareheaded and barefoot," as he described her, who, putting her hand on his arm, said

"Please don't go in there till my daughter gets herself dressed!"

Andrew thereupon drew back, and in a few minutes a young lady (Miss Howell) and another person, bent over as with age, wearing a lady's "water-proof," gathered at the waist, with a shawl drawn over the head, and carrying a tin pail, appeared and asked to go to "the run" for water Mrs Davis also appears and says

"For God's sake let my old mother go to get some water!"

No objections being made, they passed out But sharp eyes were upon the singular looking "old mother." Suddenly Corporal Munger of Company C and others at the same instant discovered that the old mother was wearing very heavy boots for an aged female, and the corporal exclaimed

"That is not a woman! Don't you see the boots?" and spurring his horse forward and cocking his carbine, compelled the withdrawal of the shawl, and disclosed Jeff Davis.

As if stung by this discovery of his unmanliness, Jeff struck an attitude, and cried out

"Is there a man among you? If there is let me see him!"

"Yes," said the corporal, "I am one and if you stir, I will blow your brains out"

"I know my fate, and might as well die here"

But his wife threw her arms around his neck, and kept herself between him and the threatening corporal

No harm however was done him, and he was generally kindly spoken to, he was only stripped of his female attire

As a man he was dressed in a complete suit of gray, a light felt hat and high cavalry boots, with a gray beard of about six weeks' growth covering his face

He said he thought that our Government was too magnanimous to hunt women and children that way

When Col Pritchard told him that he would do the best he could for his comfort, he answered

"I ask no favors of you"

To which surly reply the Colonel courteously responded by assuring him of kind treatment

* * * The prisoners having finished the breakfast which their servants were allowed to prepare for them we joyful at our success, though saddened by the price so cruelly exacted, took up the line of march for Macon Lieutenant Col Harnden and his tired "boys" sharing in the general feeling, led the way

MRS DAVIS

Mrs Davis was very watchful lest some disrespect would be shown her husband She resented the responsibility of the disguise saying, "I put the clothes on the President." She complained that the guard kept their guns cocked But when it was explained to her that the Spencer carbine was for safety carried at half cock [illegible] content, In personal appearance she is nearly the opposite of her husband who is a man [illegible] the small expression of a countenance [illegible] spare and under six feet while she is quite [illegible] of good size On the march to Macon Mr and Mrs Davis were at times seen in tears She tried to [illegible] to him, and he elegantly asked a blessing over their meals [illegible] claimed us to be did not disturb him There were men among his captors who had been prisoners at Andersonville, but they spoke of him without malice they only asked for justice as they recalled their fearful experience Davis was engrossed and claimed the horse Private Lynch had seized and when he pleased was permitted to ride him

The members of Davis' staff submitted with better grace than he to the capture, and [illegible] were generally quite communicative but when speaking to Jeff they removed their hat and addressed him as President Davis The most interesting individual of the captured party was James H Brooks, a little mulatto boy about the size of Davis' son, who was his playmate The little fellow readily affiliated with the Yankees and became quite a pet

About dusk of this day the 10th of May we reached Abbeville, where Captain Hathaway's detachment joined us

The news of Davis's capture spread like wildfire. The country people came in great crowds to see him he did not show himself, however usually avoiding the sight of those who [illegible] him We did not understand that the people had come to sympathize with him or do him honor but only that they were simply seeking to gratify their curiosity To us they expressed exultation at his capture and the prospect of peace

THE TRIAL OF CAPT WIRTZ The court martial engaged in the trial of the Andersonville jailor held but a brief session on the 7th September Three witnesses only were examined They testified to the starving, poisoning and shooting of the captives One witness, a resident of Georgia, who was in the habit of visiting Andersonville every month testified that plantations in that vicinity were large, and the farmers raised vegetables for their own use He said also that there was considerable bacon, cornmeal and syrup in the storehouses at Andersonville

The reason given for the early adjournment of the court was the illness of the prisoner Wirtz, but it is reasonable to suppose that the members of the Court themselves were grateful for a short respite from the shocking, nauseating, disgusting disclosures made on the witness stand

Wirtz is said to have become fully awakened to a sense of his awful situation The evidences of his infamy are so full and complete—so direct in proving his accountability for the murder by torture of scores of Union prisoners of war that he must have abandoned all hope of making out a defense on the plea that the responsibility for the whole management of the Andersonville prison was chargeable to officers of the rebel government who ranked him in authority If, indeed he anticipated escape from punishment through the establishment of such a theory it is not to be wondered that he trembles for the result of his trial since the disclosures that have been made on the witness stand within a few days past Upon the reassembling of the Military Commission September 8th, a communication from the prisoner was read, asking the privilege of being allowed to receive the visits for spiritual consolation of two Catholic clergymen, formerly chaplains of Andersonville The members of the court expressed their willingness to grant the request but, not having the power to do so the matter was referred to the War Department Only a few witnesses were examined, the important feature of the proceedings being the reading of the rebel documents, showing conclusively that the horrible treatment which our soldiers received at Andersonville was inflicted with the knowledge of the Richmond authorities. These comprised reports of Howell Cobb, Gen Winder, Wirtz and Dr Eldridge Cobb's report was addressed to the rebel Adjutant General Cooper, at Richmond. Judge Advocate Chipman intimated that the object of prosecution in introducing the documentary evidence was to show that though no doubt is entertained that Wirtz is an atrocious criminal, others of high rebel position shared his guilt

SOUTHERN FEELING AS TO DAVIS.—The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette writes as follows:

A quasi "officer" of questionable reputation recently reported that in the course of a short tour through the South he found plenty of hate rebels thirsting for the blood of Jeff Davis I can conceive no good to be attained by false representations of Southern temper and whatever this "officer" may have heard, I am well assured that his statement is essentially false Washington to-day is full of prominent rebels from all parts of the Confederacy Meeting them daily for months past, I have not yet found one who thinks Jeff Davis ought to be executed During a tour of two months through the South I had precisely the same experience. There are many men who disliked Davis' policy and complained of his arbitrary acts, but wherever they have spoken without restraint every man has expressed sympathy for his present condition The action of the Mississippi Convention in asking clemency in his behalf, is a fair index to the temper of the great mass of Southern people This matter is of consequence If the people were generally incensed against Jeff Davis and their other leaders for leading them into secession, it might be looked upon as evidence that they were convinced of the error of their course But they do not complain that Davis led them on a bad path. They believe he was right, and that they were right in following him, They have not changed their opinions as to the right of secession; they have simply been overpowered and compelled to submit.

BUSINESS WITH THE SOUTH.—The Philadelphia Bulletin says

The present indications are that Philadelphia will do a larger business during the present season than it has for several years past The hotels are now crowded with Western and Southern merchants, and Market street is already barricaded with boxes ready for shipment The list of arrivals at the hotels is growing every day It must be remembered that the trade season has not fully opened and that we are but on the threshold of the activities of commerce From interviews that we have had with leading merchants we infer that this will be a most prosperous year for our city It is also said that large numbers of those in the South who had liabilities with houses here are coming forward and honorably discharging them If this continues it will be doubly beneficial It will bring to the city large amounts of money and tend to re-establish the old relations between the various sections of the country

GEN. MCCLELLAN AT DRESDEN It would seem that Gen McClellan has not given up the pursuit of knowledge in the art of war Dresden correspondence of August 16th says The well known Northern General McClellan has been sojourning in Dresden for the past few days He is constantly visiting all the museums and examining the numerous collections of arms and trophies of this city It is understood that he intends to devote himself to German military studies and is now making himself thoroughly acquainted with the Prussian army which more than anything else, attracted his attention

MITCHEL, THE RENEGADE A correspondent writing from Fortress Monroe says

Clement C Clay and John Mitchel promenade the ramparts every day though at different hours, Mitchel has just received a small box of Lynchburg smoking tobacco from his son at Richmond The fragrant Lynchburg weed was allowed to pass the glittering cordon of guards and placed at John's disposal Mitchel receives the soothing weed gladly nay, thankfully, he who, scarce three months ago, repelled in advance the pardon of the President of the United States returned thanks for the privilege of being allowed to receive five pounds of smoking tobacco

ANOTHER RUMOR ABOUT JEFF DAVIS'S TRIAL A Fortress Monroe dispatch of September 4th says:

Government carpenters were set at work a few days since to convert the old telegraph office inside the Fortress into quarters for Jeff Davis But yesterday orders were issued to stop that work and prepare Carroll Hall Building which is outside the Fortress From this it is presumed the trial of Jeff Davis will take place here, and hence these preparations

A TRAVELING BATTERY George N. Sanders now goes armed, by permission of the authorities of Montreal, and wears a belt or girdle in which are slung his revolvers and bowie knife while in his side pockets he carries his small revolvers making his person quite an arsenal
